

The same covariates tested per pseudobulk and per cell

Tile label = variance explained ( $R^2$ ); shading = BH-adjusted significance.
Cell type and the three quality metrics use each cell's own value. The remaining covariates are recorded once per sample and are copied onto that sample's cells; those rows turn significant while the variance they explain falls, because the added rows are copies rather than independent observations.

